EXCERPTS FROM THE
CONSTITUTION OF THE MISS HALL'S SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

PREAMBLE

Recognizing that the ultimate responsibility for the direction of the school rests with the Headmaster and that he will delegate subordinate responsibilities to the administration, faculty, and staff; and

Recognizing that, in order to attain the purposes of the school government, it is essential that there be unity, mutual confidence, and trust among all members of the community; and

Recognizing that in order to attain our common goals we must have unity of action;

We, the members of Miss Hall's School, establish the following constitution.

ARTICLE I NAME

The name of this association shall be the Miss Hall's School Association.

ARTICLE II THE ASSOCIATION

The electoral body of the Miss Hall's School Association shall consist of: the student body, the resident administrative staff, the faculty, and the administration.

ARTICLE III PURPOSES

The purposes of the Miss Hall's School Association are:

- A. to develop and encourage a realistic attitude toward life-- one which reflects the change and currents of modern society;
- B. to develop and encourage a community spirit that will assure maximum individual freedom consistent with the demands of the common good; and
- C. to develop and encourage an educational climate in which the individual is given the freedom to explore and to develop his, or her, intellectual daring and curiosity.

ARTICLE IV THE SCHOOL COUNCIL

The governing body of the Association shall be the School Council,...

ARTICLE IX FUNCTIONS OF THE COUNCIL ARE:

- A. to encourage responsible living within the framework or existing rules.
- B. to discuss and to consider matters of interest to the school as a whole and to take appropriate action.
- C. to provide leadership and to encourage proper decorum within the school.
- D. to promote harmony and good will within the school.

ARTICLE XI FUNCTIONS OF THE GUIDANCE COMMITTEE

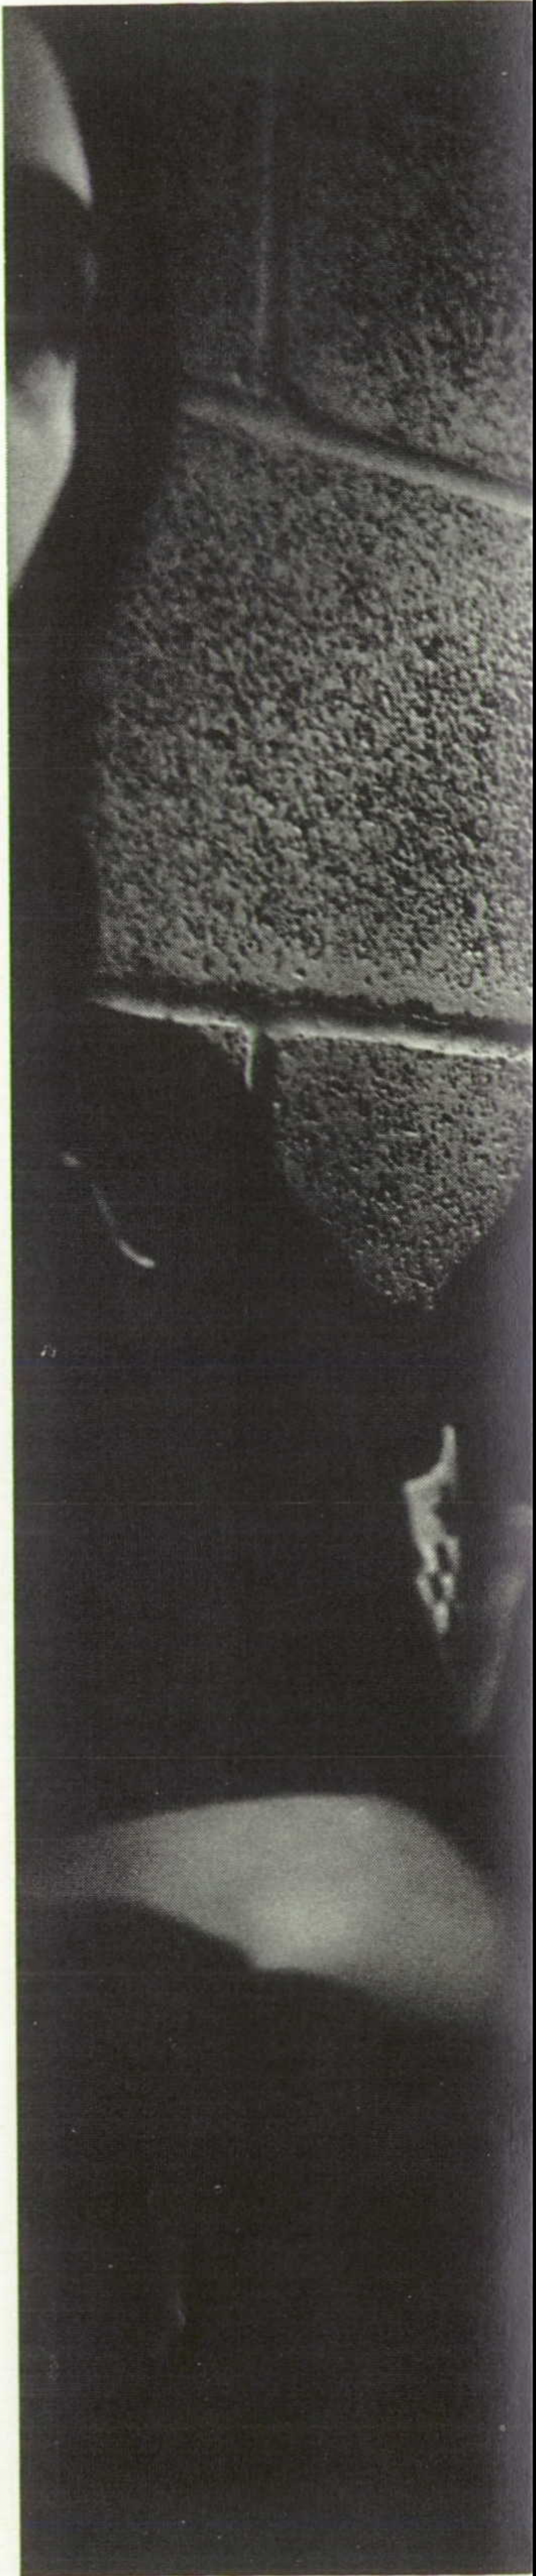

The Guidance Committee is:

- A. authorized to serve as an advisory body, assisting the student to live within the rules and regulations of the school;
- B. authorized to consider violations of school rules and regulations and to take appropriate action;
- C. directed to refer matters that might involve suspension or expulsion to the Headmaster for disposition;
- D. charged with the responsibility for reviewing, for proposing revisions, and for publishing school rules and regulations;
- E. directly responsible to the School Council.

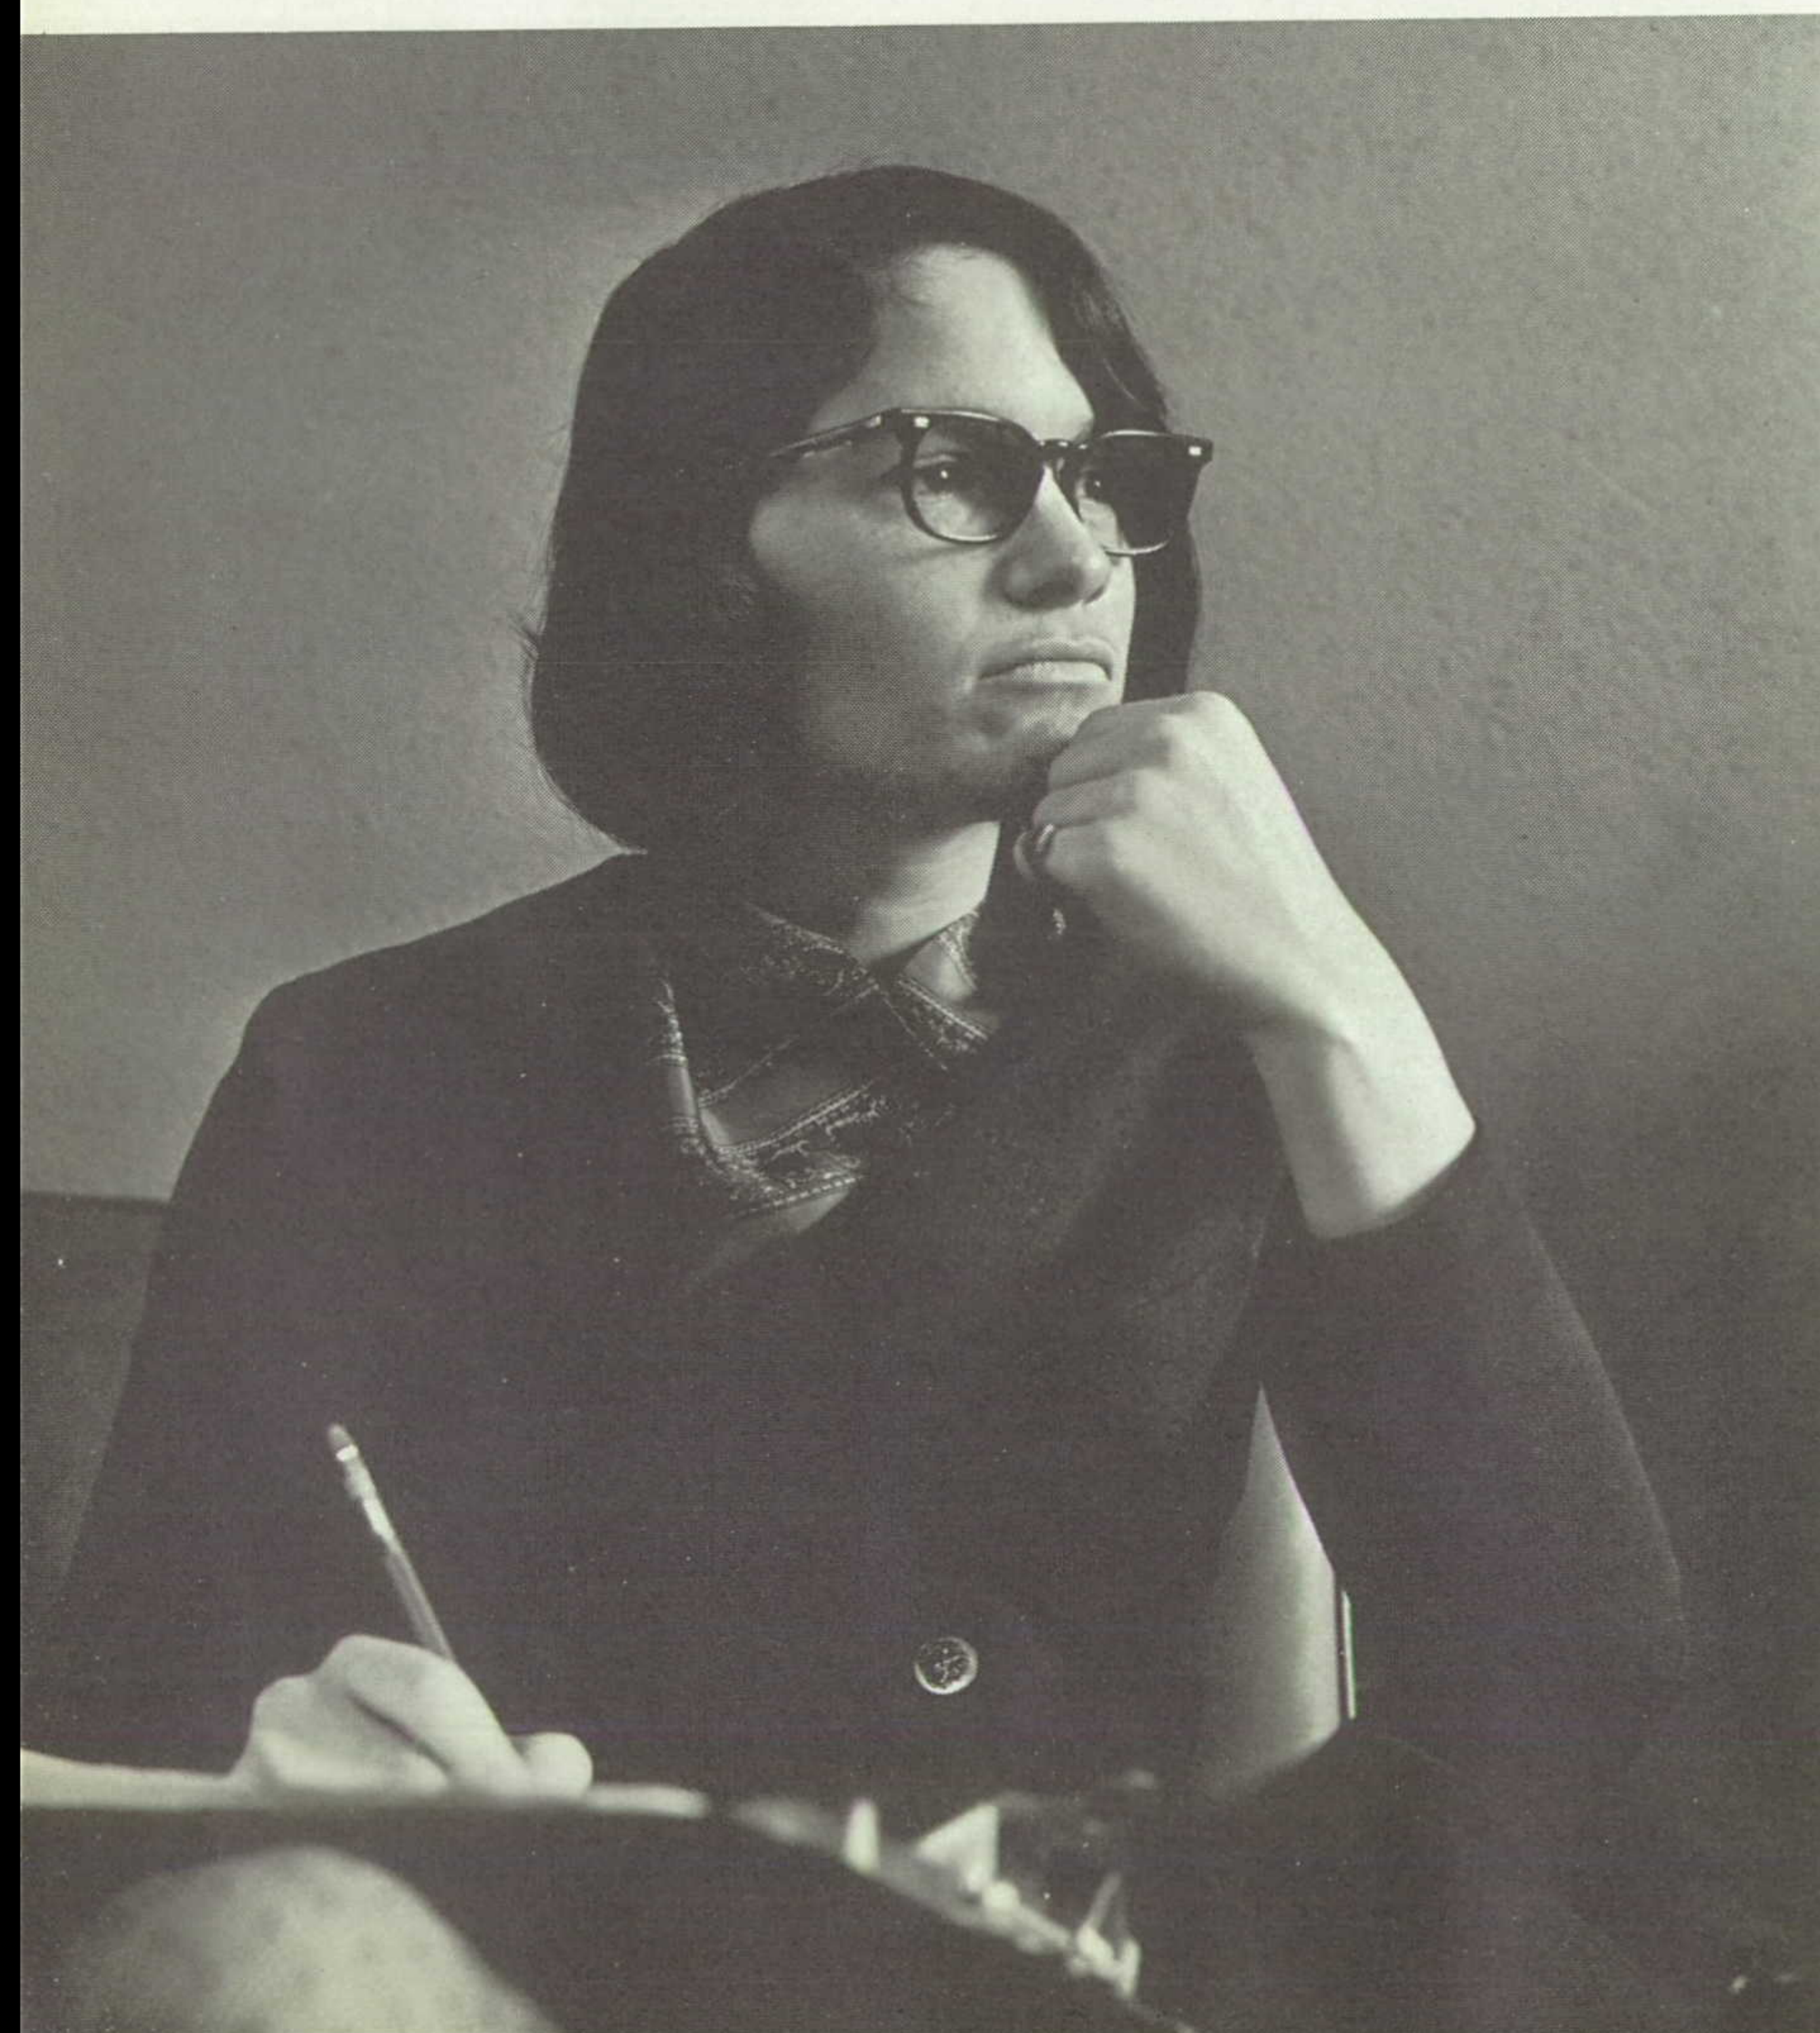

ARTICLE XII RATIFICATION AND IMPLEMENTATION

- A. This Constitution shall be considered ratified when it has been approved by a two-thirds vote of the Association; members of the student body, the resident administrative staff, the faculty, and the administration.
- B. This Constitution shall be in effect immediately upon its ratification.

Excerpts from THROUGH THE MIST ABOVE THE POND

Of course, I could tell you about the famous Miss Hall's legend -- on full-mooned midnights the Beast of Loch Ness rises from the middle of the bottomless pond and then...Well, I won't tell you that story.

What I want to talk about is, to me, equally as intriguing, as mysterious, and as wonderful. The mist is clearing. And we are beginning to perceive the shape of things to come at Miss Hall's.

Miss Hall's was and is a fine School! But to remain so she must change appropriately while at the same time reaffirming those characteristics which have made her strong and proud and unique. In imaginative ways we must adopt or re-emphasize those educational concepts which can and must, for survival's sake, set us appealingly apart from other schools, both public and independent. Our main strengths are three: (1) we can provide "personalized" instruction. Note that I said "personalized" not "individualized" instruction, which is currently an "okay" word in the language of education. Instruction can be "individualized" quite effectively by computerizing libraries and establishing electronic language laboratories. But one can only "personalize" instruction, "humanize" it if you will, through an honest and respectful exchange of ideas between a teacher and a student. This is the core of the educational process! Our concern should always be for them and for their exchange...

In the past, I have found, sadly, that when the idea of change is entertained in the area of education more often than not attention is given almost exclusively to changes in structure -- to a different school year, to longer or shorter school days and class periods, and the like. While structural changes have value and are at times required, it must be recognized continually that the key, the critical quality of a personally meaningful educational experience has to do with such things as feeling, attitude, atmosphere...

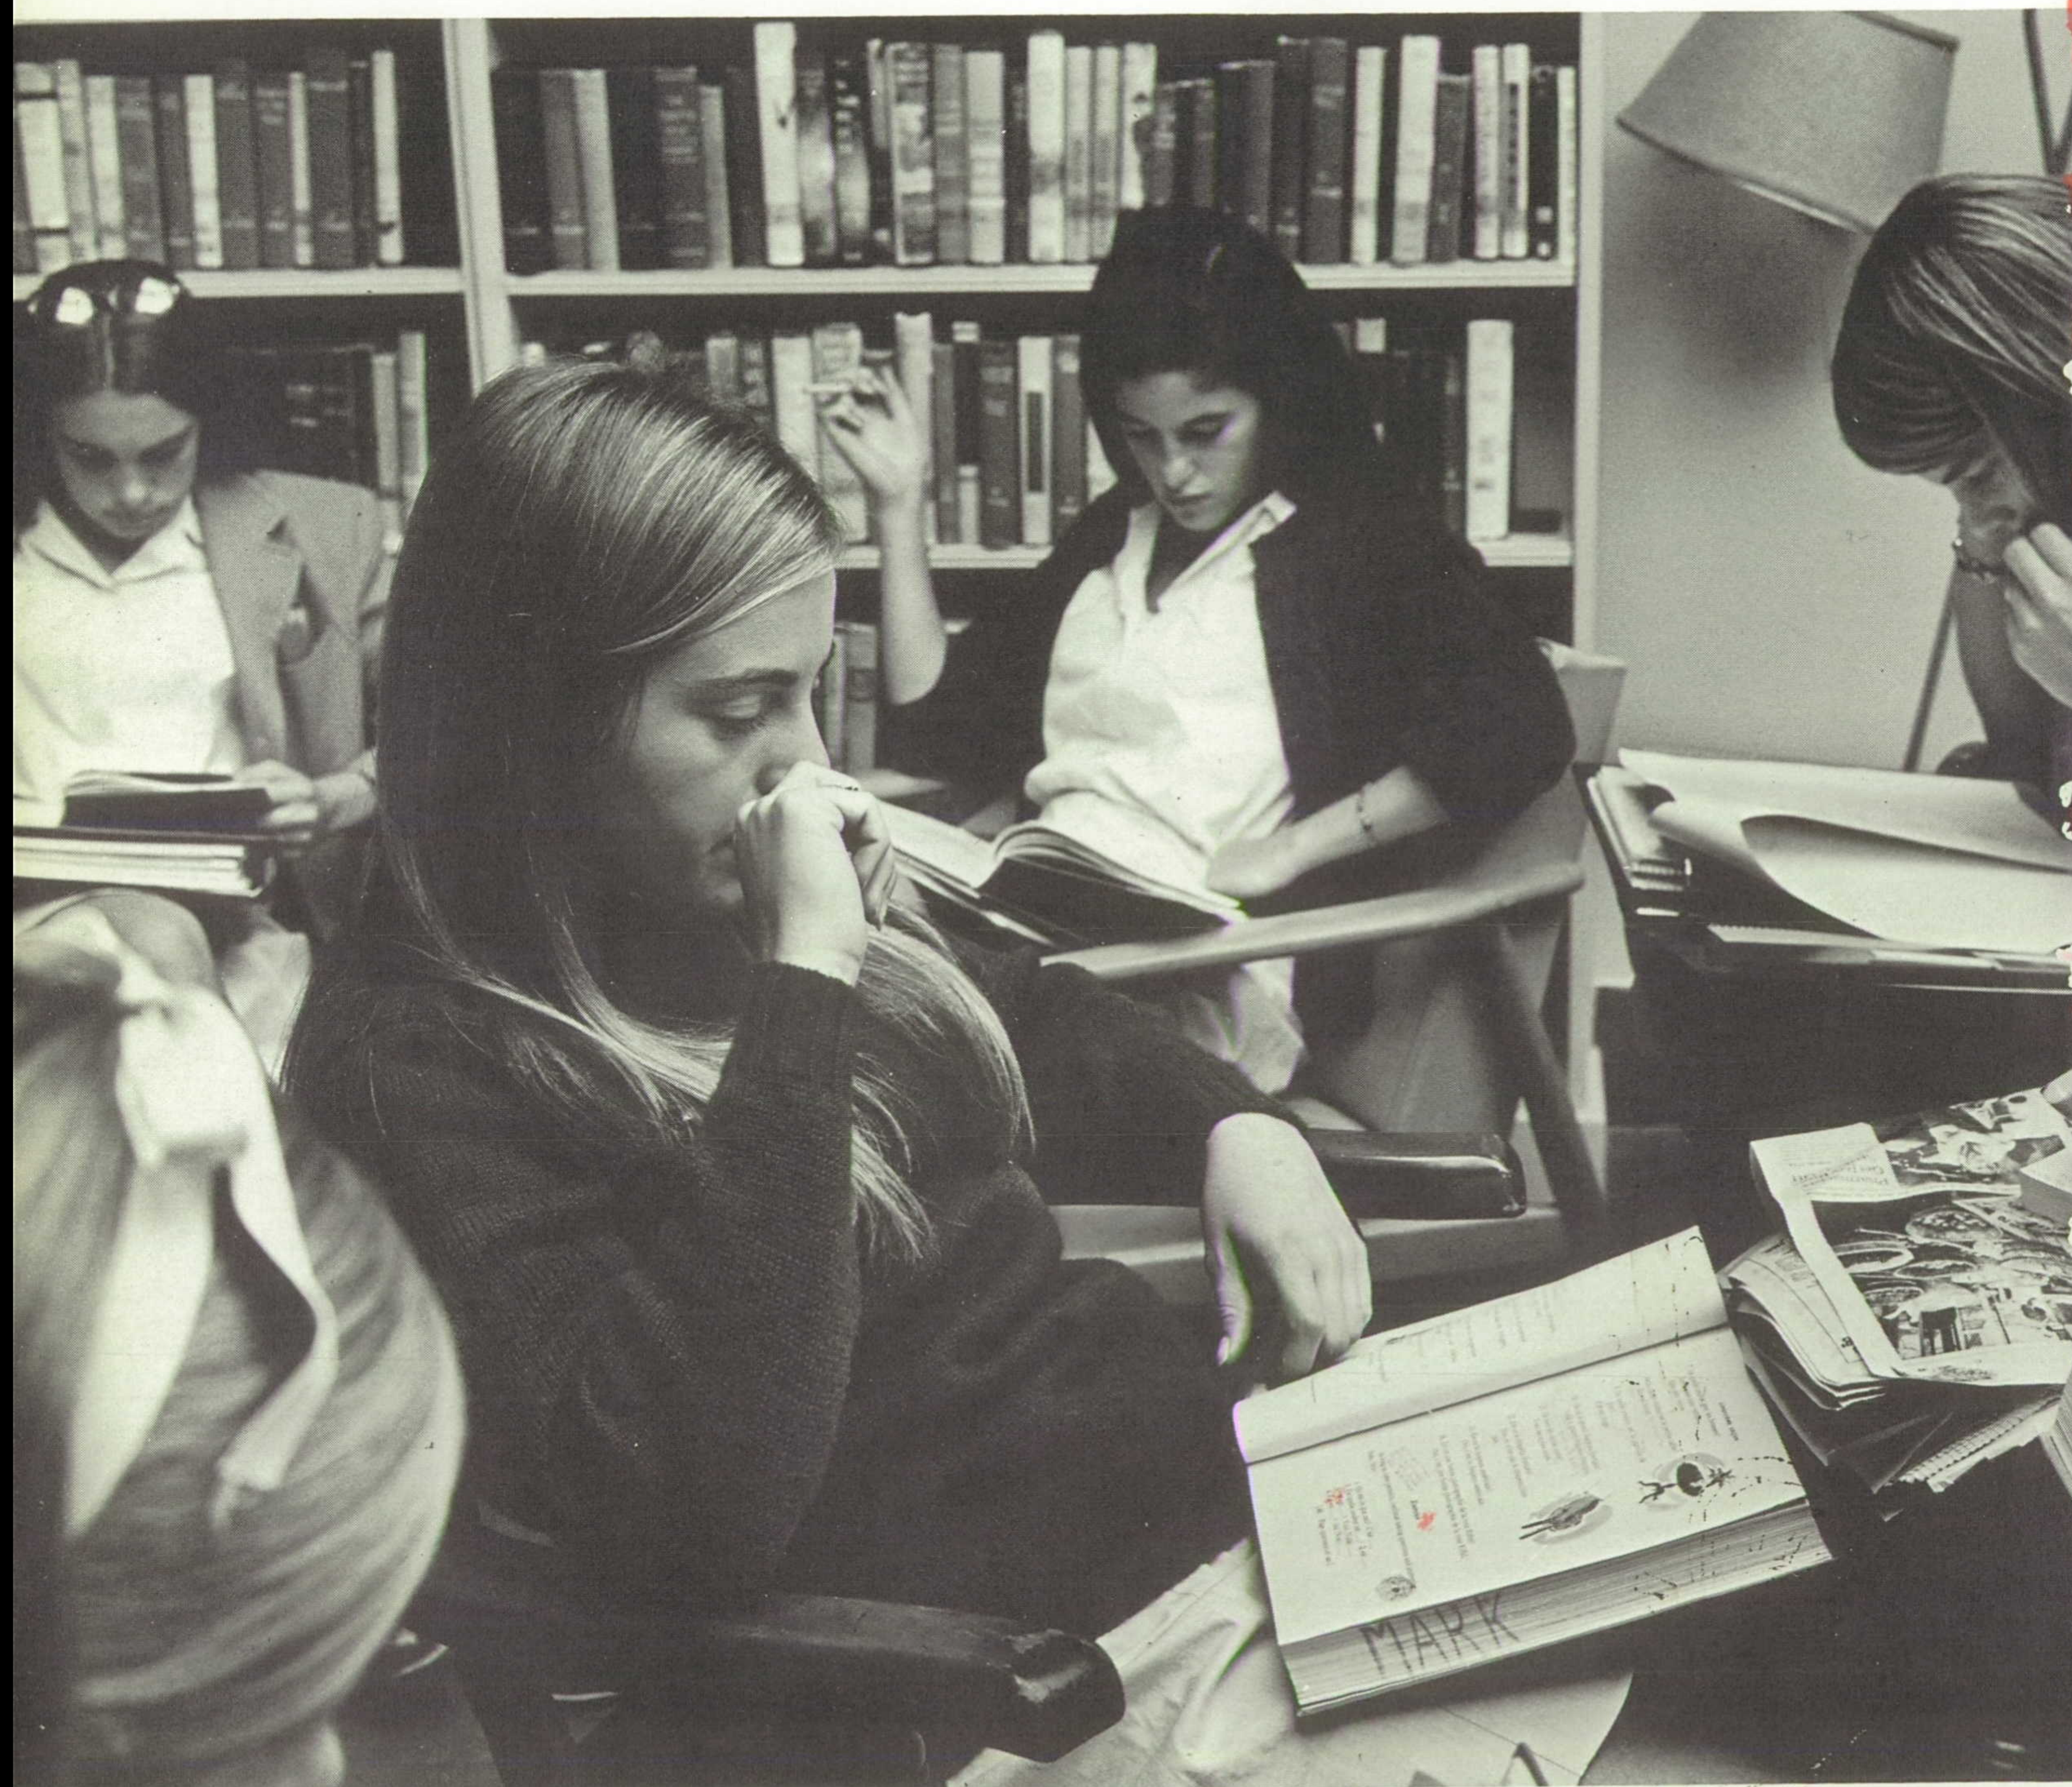

At a time when young adults are exuberant and vibrant, they are contained. At a time when they should be encouraged to understand and use freedom, they are denied it. At a time when they need integrality, they are given greater diversity. And please do not counter with the statement that "only in a careful analysis of its elements can we understand the nature of the compound." A principle of Gestalt psychology has fuller meaning for me each day: the whole is more than the sum of its parts.

At a time when young adults are struggling to define themselves as individuals, they are jammed together and moved about, grouped and regrouped. At a time when they desperately need a sympathetic audience, they cannot find an adult who is willing or able to hear them. At a time when they should be given time to lie on the cool grass and stare at a lazy sky, when they should savor reflective thoughts, they are dizzily catapulted through time and space by the irrepressible hands of a master clock. How much sadder this becomes when we realize that youth's grandest possessions are time and space, and the courage and vitality to live in them. At a time when there is a need for the development of the internal controls, external pressures are increased. Successful education is never achieved by constraint. Education should be "a leading forth" not an "imposition."...

Guided by these assumptions and with your support, we hope that you, with us, will witness a rebirth of wonder. You can see it coming through the mist above the pond.

Automotive safety fashion

notes (from the new McCord...the innovator)

This year, McCord has a bigger hand than ever in automotive safety.

For the exterior of a popular 1969 car, the Davidson Division supplies a molded urethane insert that fits into a chromed retainer on the rear bumper. The feature provides a padded contact surface that cushions minor bumps.

Through a new Davidson process, plastisol covers of padded arm rests and other safety parts, are perfectly color-matched to metallic-spray-painted interiors, eliminating costly painting.

These are just two examples of how The New McCord is contributing exciting new ideas to automotive safety and styling.
